China is the place for food

味在四川

Sichuan is the place for flavour

川妹子
Sichuan Greenwich

Boasted as one of the Four Great Traditions of Chinese cuisine, Sichuan cuisine is far too complex to be simply labelled as 'spicy'.

What makes Sichuan food so addictive is the sheer variety in tastes and flavours: spicy, sweet, sour, smoky, salty, etc. Fusing these flavours into a single dish creates beautiful symphonies that are guaranteed to dance in harmony with the receptors in your mouth.

As you navigate through the menu, you will find the prominent dishes from Sichuan at the start of the menu, whereas Cantonese dishes (that deserve just as much recognition) are located towards the back.

Amongst all ingredients in Sichuanese cuisine, the Sichuan peppercorn is the most renowned. One bite will send you on a 'numbing-spice' 麻辣 experience. This one-of-a-kind sensation proves addictive when paired with the fieriness of Sichuan chillies.

'Sea spiced' 鱼香 is another unique flavour profile. Despite the name, no ingredients come from the sea. Instead, spices and condiments that were popularly used in traditional Chinese fish cookery are employed to create a piquant, sweet and sour sauce.

Dried chillies are the star of the show when producing 'fragrant' 香辣 dishes, the scorched chillies add one more dimension of flavour to the paired produce: a delight to both the tongue and nose.

Most dishes can be altered to be less spicy to your liking.
